

A serial killer is on the loose. He's already killed two women. Now a third is about to die - Chloe Vincent - a cop masquerading as a dancer at Demeter City's newest hot spot, The Taunt. Chloe's partner, Lieutenant Verro Walker is also at the Taunt, but by the time he's able to push his way through the crowd and burst into Chloe's dressing room, it's too late. Her body is shaking. Her eyes are rolling back into her head. Soon she drops to the floor - dead. The killer, Enil Kmada, is nowhere to be seen.

Chloe Vincent's autopsy reveals no cause of death - and this throws the officers of the 88th Precinct into a stupor. They all turn to Slomo, the robotic wunderkind, for an answer. A picture of Kmada sets Slomo's data bank humming, revealing that this alien was suspected in a string of homicides - all of them involving young women - nearly a hundred years ago.

Meanwhile Kmada strikes again. This time it's a hooker - an informant for Lieutenant Walker. Right after Brogan, Haldane and Walker meet her in a deserted waterfront scrap yard, she is attacked. As the officers are walking away, Walker hears her muffled screams. He turns around. There is Kmada.

How could it be possible for Kmada to remain alive for centuries?

A visit to a Tarn book shop reveals the answer. Kmada is from a race known as the Meki. Centuries ago, the souls of the Meki were lost and condemned to live out their lives in the bodies of others. Thus, Kmada needed a host - a body in which he could hibernate until his need for a life force would propel him to kill - and keep on killing until he had acquired enough life force to resume his hibernation.

But who could the host be?? The answer is revealed the next night when Jane Castle goes undercover as a dancer at The Taunt. Brogan and Haldane are there in plain clothes. So is Walker. And so is Kmada. A panicked Took beeps Brogan with the revelation. Kmada lives inside Walker!!

Walker, realizing that he is the host for Kmada, is left with no other option. He raises his gun to his head - and fires. Brogan rushes him to the hospital, staying by his side in the ambulance. But it's too late. Walker arrives at the hospital dead on arrival.

But what Brogan is soon to learn is that when a member of the Meki race realizes that its host is going to die, it immediately finds another host - in the body that is closest to it at the time! Translation: Now Brogan is hosting Kmada!!

A terrifying night ensues at the Brogan home as Kmada wrecks havoc with Brogan's wife and children. Brogan's only way of protecting his family is to head for the Precinct and enlist the aid of the only one who (literally and figuratively) has the power to put an end to Kmada - Slomo - the Precinct robot. The question is, will Slomo's electrical charge also put an end to Brogan??
